

REVISIONIST PHOTOS: LOOKING AWAY FROM THE HOLOCAUST

The photos on these pages are, in most cases, bland at best. They show nothing horrific; they could be viewed by children. And it is my hope that they are most disturbing.

You know what a Holocaust revisionist is. It's a person who claims that the most horrific event of the 20th century didn't happen. Or, at least, that it was not all that bad. It's a person who believes that those who claim to have survived the death camps are liars, or deluded, or in possession of faulty memories.

These photos are for the revisionists. They show the world revisionism seeks to create.

At one time, each of these images depicted a sign of the Holocaust. Hitler. Auschwitz. A pile of bodies. A humiliated Jew. Those signs have been removed. The executioners have been relieved of responsibility. The dead have been denied their place in history.

Don't ask me to show you the originals; they no longer exist.

History has been revised.

Look back in comfort. If you can.

Photos

Top: Reaction to the Dead

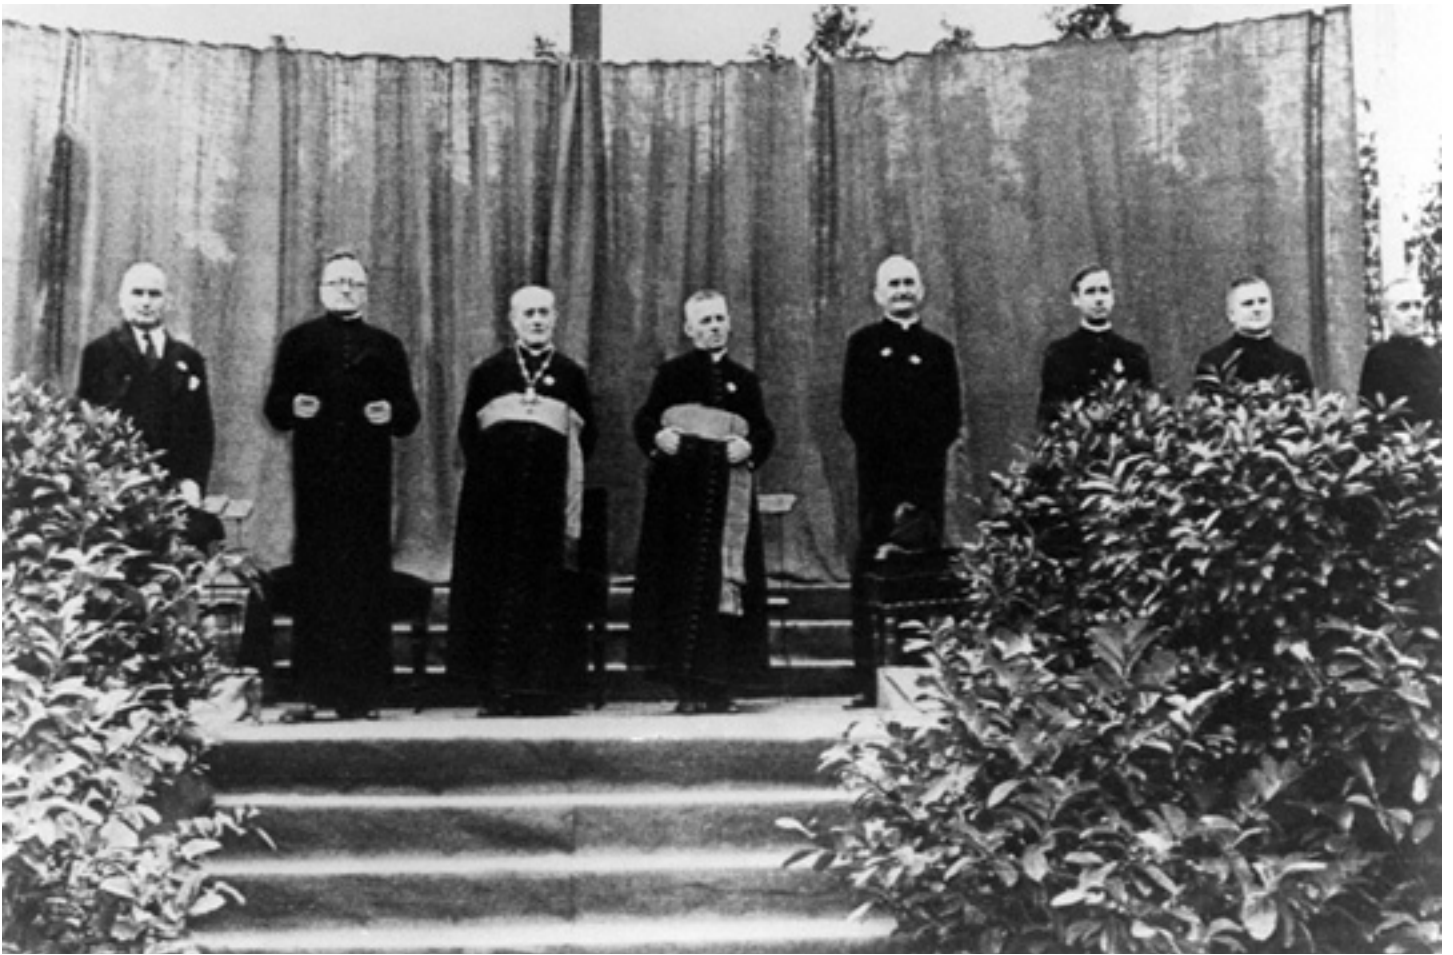

Bottom: Auschwitz, Work Makes You Free

Although the artist wishes to remain anonymous, you may write to him at art@revisionistphotos.com

Clockwise from top right:
Sign: Jews Are Not Welcome Here,
Execution at the Lodz Ghetto,
Hitler in Paris,
Nazis at the University of Vienna.

Top: Nazi Salute with Priests
Bottom: One for the Oven

